Chinese government scientists have identified a new coronavirus as the cause of a mystery pneumonia outbreak in the central city of Wuhan. At least 59 people were infected with the new strain, and First, no one on Earth has existing immunity to the novel coronavirus (other than the 80, 000 people who have already been infected). Because of global mobility, that means that pretty much everyone will be susceptible to catching it; with the sofar measured death rate that translates into millions of deaths.

China reported 27 new deaths from the novel coronavirus with 44 new cases, while the Pentagon reported that a US Marine who had travelled abroad has contracted the virus. Yesterday, Jammu and Coronavirus does not survive nowhere nearly as well in hot and humid 30 C than in below 10 C, the optimum. That is why we are not seeing Thailand becoming a new Italy or any tropical countries suffering a major epidemic. There will be cases but not in huge numbers. Community spreading is much more difficult here due to climate.
